

AN EXPERIENTIAL GROUP FOR HEALTH PRACTITIONERS

There are many people conducting groups in hospitals and other settings who have not had the experience of being in a group themselves, and who can see that this experience could be of value to them.

It may also be of interest to people who are planning further training in group work.

The group will provide an opportunity for clinicians to explore aspects of themselves within a contained and confidential group setting. Whilst it may be therapeutic it is not therapy. It is more concerned with offering participants an experience in a group which, whilst making participants aware of their own personal growth and development, will hopefully deepen their understanding of their own clinical work.
